SHORT STORIES OF THE CITY

Crittenden Circle.—On account of the school exercises there will not be a meeting of the Florence Crittenden circle until further notice. By order of the president.

Sixty Days in Jail.—R. F. Miller was yesterday sentenced by Judge Thomas to spend sixty days in jail for fighting. Miller became engaged in an altercation with Jack Mankins in Doc Munn's saloon on North Broad street. The men were separated, but when Mankins left the saloon Miller said to have left him with an empty bottle, following up his attack with several vigorous kicks at Mankins' head.

Death of Miner.—After a brief illness, L. Cladd, a well known miner of the district, passed away on Tuesday evening at his home on East Push street. Deceased was a single man about 35 years of age, and for some time prior to his death was employed at the Old Dominion. He was a member of Globe Miners' union, No. 60. Relatives in Wardsdale, Mo., have been notified, and the body will be held pending advices from them.

Funeral.—Funeral services over the remains of Frank C. Egner were conducted from the Methodist church yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock and were largely attended. The body was laid to rest at Union cemetery. Deceased, a lad of 11 years, met death by the accidental discharge of a pistol last Sunday.

Granted a Divorce.—Clara B. Lindsay was granted a divorce yesterday in the district court from Paschal A. Lindsay by Judge Nave.

No Trace of Hodges.—At the sheriff's office it was reported yesterday that no trace of Ed Hodges, who escaped from jail Monday night, had been discovered. Several of the officers believe that the man is still in Globe and that he is being concealed by friends.

Found His Watch.—Manager A. Hansen of the Dominion hotel went quail hunting Tuesday and yesterday morning he missed his gold watch. Concluding that he had dropped it while slaughtering quail, he secured a horse and buggy and drove to the place he visited in search of game, about five miles from Globe. He stopped at about the point he thought he had passed and about six inches from the horse's hoofs lay the watch. Mr. Hansen is certain that the financial stringency will soon pass into history.

Changes Firms.—C. W. Clement, the popular salesman of Holbrook, Merrill & Stetson, is on his last visit to Globe for that firm and will quit hardware for U. M. C. cartridges. His successor is Harry Lee of Los Angeles, who is accompanying him on this trip. Mr. Clement has been coming to Globe for the last five years and his many friends will be pleased to know that he will continue to visit Globe at frequent intervals.

Union Services.—Union Thanksgiving services in which all the local churches and the Salvation Army will participate will be held at the Methodist church this evening and all are invited to attend. A splendid program has been arranged for the occasion.

New Bank Vault.—The Globe Bank & Savings company has ordered constructed a time lock vault, in which to carry its reserve. A double cage safe will run ten feet under water and be made absolutely safe. It will cost much less than ordinary vaults and be practical in all respects.

Bert Collum Married.—Bert Collum, a former resident of Globe, who is now extensively engaged in mining in Pinal county, was married in Phoenix November 15 to Miss Wilson. They will reside in Phoenix during the winter. Mr. Collum was a deputy sheriff here during Dan Williamson's term as sheriff and has many friends among the old timers.

Dance This Evening.—The Fraternal Brotherhood will give a Thanksgiving ball this evening at the Maurel hall. This lodge has been making an excellent reputation in a social way and a good time is promised all who attend.

Woodmen Meeting.—There will be a meeting of Globe camp, Modern Woodmen of America, Friday evening at Odd Fellows' hall. This will be the last meeting before the charter list is closed and all are requested to be present.

Wed Last Evening.—Simplicio Abrego and Miss Tereza Corral were united in marriage last evening at the home of the bride's uncle, William Gray on Euclid avenue, Judge Hinson Thomas performing the ceremony. The ceremony was followed by a wedding supper and an enjoyable reception.

Slot Machine Shines Shoes. Broadway has a new thrill, warranted to stimulate the understanding and to spread a genial glow through feet that are cold. Thousands experienced it yesterday in acquiring shines from a battery of automatic electrical shoe cleaning machines which made their debut at a prominent Broadway corner not far from the Metropolitan opera house. At first view the contrivances look like penny in the slot scales. There is a shelf at the bottom in which there is a hole the size of a No. 20 shoe. Into this the confiding customer places his foot. He then drops a nickel in the slot and presses a button. Out of the depths come four rotary brushes, which run up over the instep in front, neatly brush the heels and play hide and seek with the sides of the footgear under treatment. After all the dust is brushed away, the machine softly purrs and sings and the blacking is distributed in a fine spray by an atomizer. Then another set of fore and aft brushes whirl over the surface of the shoe and after that a soft green felt muf appears and gives the finishing touches to the shine. —New York Herald.

Union Notice

Globe Mill and Smeltermen's union No. 153 will meet Friday night, November 29. Important business will be transacted and all members are requested to be present. WM. HILL, Financial Secretary.

Black Wolf's Bad Heart

[Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe.] The Cheyennes had fought the white soldiers for fifteen years. Chief Walk-by-Night had started out in the belief that there were only about 5,000 white men in all America, and as soon as he could get them together he would finish them off, but after many years he came to have a better understanding.

When the first blades of green grass were seen on the southern hillsides word was sent out to the subchiefs to gather in council. All responded but Black Wolf. He was a fiery tempered young man of twenty-five. It had so happened that he and his band had taken all the scalps gathered in during the year past, and he was ambitious, fearless and a great hunter. He wanted war all the time. He had plans to round up all the white soldiers and make a grand finish of them. Let the Cheyennes perform some daring deed and they might count on an alliance with at least three other tribes. Black Wolf claimed to be ill and asked for a few days' delay.

On the bluffs on the north bank of Medicine creek the white soldiers were building a fort. It was within the Cheyenne territory and was another insult to them. Black Wolf had seen the men at work the previous fall. During the winter work would have been suspended, but now that spring had come the white men would be busy again, and again the white topped wagons would roll across the plains.

Those wagons, as he knew, contained flour, meat, firearms, powder and bullets, blankets, cooking utensils, clothing and many other things needed by his tribe. If he could run off five or six of them, with perhaps half a hundred mules and horses, the wealth of the tribe would be restored twice over. The feat would be a daring one, and one to challenge admiration and bring about alliances. Walk-by-Night would no longer cover his face and talk of peace, but his voice would be for war and his face painted to strike terror to the hearts of his enemies.

It was a golden opportunity for Black Wolf. He had less than fifty warriors in his band, but all were enthusiastic and sure of success. It was a ride of seventy-five miles from the camp to the bluffs where the fort was building, but this was less than two days' ride, even on the half starved ponies. The medicine man made his medicine and pronounced it good, and away rode the young men. The soldiers were busy, and a wagon train was crawling over the plains. The Indians could not have asked for the situation to be bettered. They lost little time in pushing in. The last six wagons were cut off by a brilliant dash, seven of the escort killed and the six drivers saved to be tortured at the stake later on. The soldiers turned out from the new fort and gave chase, but were beaten back. Six double mule teams and twelve led horses were among the fruits of the capture, and under the covers of the wagons was wealth beyond compare. That was a proud moment for Black Wolf when he brought his prisoners and plunder safe to the main camp. He also had his little speech ready.

"I have heard it said that the Cheyennes had become a tribe of women," he said. "With forty-two warriors I have captured what you see before you. Let that be the answer. I have heard it whispered that we must make peace and go upon the reservation to escape hunger and cold. In the wagons here are enough food and blankets to last us for years. If forty-two of us have done this, what cannot 1,000 of us do? There are 500 white men at the new fort. Are we to leave them in peace, or are their scalps to hang on our lodges?"

All this and a heap more was said by Black Wolf before he was through with his speech, and he carried the crowd with him. Walk-by-Night concluded that he had made a big mistake and straightway repented of it, while the squaws chanted and the warriors bragged and swaggered. The village now numbered 800 people. Some of the bands had not yet come in. Five of the wagons were unloaded, and the hopes of the redskins were more than realized. There were pork, beef, sugar, coffee and flour by the barrel. There were bacon, hard tack, beans, peas, rice and tobacco. The six wagons were in the center of the village. The stuff taken from the five made a great heap. The contents of the sixth were left for inspection on the morrow.

By and by, when all speeches had been concluded, hunger satisfied and the crowd had got hold of enough whiskey to give everybody a whooping old time, some of the younger bucks began firing their guns. One of the teamsters called out to them and tried to explain something. He was given a slap on the face, and the revel went on.

Ten minutes later one of the bullets fired by a mad dancer penetrated the box of a wagon, and there instantly followed an explosion that shook the earth for thirty miles around. It had been the last wagon in the train. It was loaded with dynamite for blasting down a portion of the bluffs. The blast struck the hills to the west and came back to strike those on the east. It dug a hole in the earth thirty feet deep and a hundred feet long. It sent hundreds of bodies high in air, and it flung hundreds of others about like feathers.

Walk-by-Night was dead. Black Wolf was dead. One Horn and Great Thunder were dead. The power of the tribe was broken forever, and the soldiers even pitied the miserable remnant that came crawling in and asked to be put on a reservation and clothed and fed. Black Wolf's ambition had done the trick. M. QUAD.

Royal Incognitos
The fact that the King of Spain has traveled as Count of Toledo recalls to mind that incognitos are much used by modern royalty. The emperor of Austria travels as Count Hohenembs, the king of Italy as Count di Pollenzi, the king of Portugal as Count de Barcelles, and King Oscar of Sweden as Count von Haga. Then our own royalties hide their identities as follows: King Edward travels as the duke of Lancaster, and when prince of Wales, used the title of Lord Renfrew. Queen Alexandra is often countess of Chester, but once stayed in Paris as plain Mrs. Stevens. Princess Victoria has traveled as Miss Johnson, and in old days, Queen Maud of Norway made trips as Miss Mills, with her governess, on the continent. The princess of Wales travels as countess of Killarney; Princess Christian is Countess Gravenstein, and Princess Henry of Battenberg is Lady Carlsbrooke—London Tit-Bits.
